

Abstract

In this project we implement and compare two numerical methods for solving ordinary differential equations. We then use these to look at statistical properties in a N -body system representing an open galactic cluster.